The FBI has now placed Abdel-Hafiz on administrative leave and has sent him back to the United States, FBI officials told ABCNEWS, though they would not reveal the reasons why.

The Riyadh office is considered one of the most critical for intelligence gathering on terrorist activity in the region. Fifteen of the 19 Sept. 11 hijackers were Saudi nationals.

Several of the top leaders of al Qaeda, including Osama bin Laden himself, are Saudi and numerous reports of al Qaeda activity in Saudi Arabia continue to be received by Saudi and Western intelligence agencies.

Following inquiries by ABCNEWS, the FBI now confirms it conducted a special inspection of the Riyadh embassy where the two agents were assigned, and a second inspection was ordered to address issues that FBI officials will not identify. For more details, including accusations leveled against one of the agents, go to: http://members.abcnews.go.com/sections/us/DailyNews/Insider_030227.html.
